Rob Liddell has more than 25 years of experience as a business trial lawyer. In both state and federal courts, Rob represents both corporate and individual clients in a wide array of business disputes involving creditors' rights, fraud, employment issues, breach of contract, fraudulent conveyances, bankruptcy, class-actions, replevins, attachments, equipment leases and real property.

Rob regularly counsels clients in commercial disputes regarding their rights as creditors. In a recent case he handled, which was reported at County of Oswego Industrial Development Agency v. Fulton Cogeneration Associates, L.P., U.S. App. LEXIS 16135 (2d Cir. 2010), Rob recovered more than $5 million for an industrial development agency in unpaid PILOT agreement payments.

Rob is a frequent speaker and writer on creditors' rights issues. He presents at the New York State Bar Association continuing legal education seminar on "Collections and the Enforcement of Money Judgments." He also co-authored several supplements to the New York State Bar Association's publication of Collections and the Enforcement of Money Judgments.
